FIRST SERVICES IN NEW CHURCH

St. James Has Largest Sunday School in its History for Opening of New Church. Many New Members Added to Congregation.

With the largest Sunday School in the history of the congregation and the largest attendance at a church service, St. James Lutheran congregation on Sunday entered their new building at the corner of York and Stratton streets. Though only the rear portion of the edifice is ready for use it was a day of rejoicing and happiness to all those who were present and members and visitors alike were delighted with the new church.

An attendance of 529 was registered at the Sunday School service in the morning. This breaks all records which is saying a great deal, for St. James is noted for its large attendance at Sabbath School sessions. One of the most remarkable features of this service was the organization of a men's Bible class which started with a membership of one hundred. They are placed in the "pitt" of the room, all the galleries and other parts of the building facing them and the class making an inspiring sight for the other members of the school. Rev. J. B. Baker will teach the class which is expected to grow to at least 150, forming the largest single class which has ever existed in Gettysburg.

At the morning church service there was further cause for rejoicing when no less than forty eight members were received into the church. More than half of these were confirmed and the remainder were received by renewal of letter. The Young Men's Brotherhood saw that all the older members of the congregation, who desired to be present and were not able to walk, were gotten to church. Edgar Miller and Walter Johns conveying them in automobiles and it was a day of great pleasure to these who have lived to see so many years of activity as members of St. James.

The evening Christian Endeavor service was interesting as usual, the church orchestra playing at this and the evening church service. The latter drew an attendance of eight hundred, practically filling the large new room. It was the Easter service of the Sunday School and enjoyable as usual.

The manner in which the new Sunday School auditorium accommodated the large crowd at Sunday's services was the source of much gratification. The three galleries and the other floor space were all utilized and no one was crowded. The lighting arrangement is all that could be desired and acoustics are excellent.

During this week the work on the building will be finished and by next Sunday it will be practically complete. During the week the workmen ask to be allowed to work uninterrupted and people are requested not to enter the church at any time. There will be no services until next Sunday when Communion will be held morning and evening.

In all the churches of town on Sunday Easter was observed in the customary manner, the Sunday Schools holding appropriate exercises, Easter floral decorations being in evidence and Easter sermons being preached. A number of new members were received on Sunday or during Passion Week and the season was one of rejoicing to all.

The Easter festival was celebrated in the Catholic church with all the grandeur and solemnity of the ancient ritual. The church was crowded at both masses. Father Dougherty officiated and preached at 8 a. m., and the Rev. Father Leonard, a Franciscan friar, preached at the 10 o'clock mass. Before this service there was a procession of priests and vested boys from the rectory to the church. At both the morning and evening services the choir rendered some of the most difficult and classical church music. More than six hundred persons received Holy Communion during Holy Week.

WANTED at once good man having boys or girls over age of 14 years to work in floor tile factory. Good large house to live in; also boys and girls wanted over 14 years old. Regular work and good wages for all. Penn Tile Works, Aspers, Pa.

BOY wanted about 16 years old, first class opportunity to learn A No. 1 business in a Gettysburg store with future advancement. Must be neat, clean and strong. Address by letter in own handwriting. "J" Times office.

WANTED at once, a good reliable man or boy to do general farm work. Must understand the handling of stock. Apply, giving reference, to Joseph B. Twining, Gettysburg route 12.

FOR SALE: lot of timber, Joseph B. Twining, route 12, Gettysburg.

FIRST ACCIDENT AT NEW BUILDING

William Hemler Has Leg Broken at New Federal Building Site. Action of Frost on Ground Blamed for Accident.

The first serious accident which has taken place in the course of operations at the new federal building occurred on Saturday afternoon about 2.15 when William Hemler was caught by a cave-in of ground and sustained a broken leg, the bone being fractured immediately above the ankle.

Mr. Hemler was working in a trench at the west side along Baltimore street when the accident happened. The dirt there had been used for filling in and was composed principally of clay with some ground, which, coupled with the effects of frost and thaw, made it unstable. As Mr. Hemler was working with a pick at this accumulation, suddenly a large portion gave way and he was caught in the landslide.

As he tried to get out of its way his left leg was caught by the heavy clay and the bone was fractured. At least a cartload of dirt rolled in upon him, a space about 6 feet long, 3 1/2 feet high and eighteen inches in thickness falling in the landslide.

Mr. Hemler was taken to his home on West High street and the fracture was reduced. He is now resting as comfortably as can be expected. He has been engaged in the operations at the federal building since work was first started, Mr. Hemler having used his wagon and team to remove the first ground taken out when ground was broken last August.

BLOWN UP BY DYNAMITE

Lying in the Chambersburg Hospital, blind and mortally wounded, is a young Italian, whose Americanized name is Salvatore Ulla, who is said to be the victim of a deliberate attempt at murder by his enemy, who took the fiendish method of killing him by blowing him up by a dynamite blast.

It seems that for some time the Italian had been at odds with Packer Paul, the men were employed by the contractors, who are constructing the Chambersburg sewer system. The two men had had several quarrels. Fanned by comrades, the anger of each grew worse against the other.

Saturday when the men went to work, Paglo said he would finish his former friend that day. As noon approached Paglo got his chance. A blast was to be put off. His enemy went into the ditch to wire the dynamite. As he was doing this his blood thirsty enemy pushed the lever and sent off the blast.

The man was picked up mortally wounded and taken to the hospital.

Meanwhile the alleged murderer made his escape.

WARMER BEGINNING TUESDAY

Temperature will be near the seasonable average throughout the country this week, with rains generally light and local, according to the weekly weather bulletin.

"A change to considerably cooler weather," says the bulletin, "will overspread the Eastern districts Monday, but it will be followed by rising temperature on Tuesday and for several days thereafter."

"Warmer weather is also probable in the Middle West and the South Monday and Tuesday. The next disturbance of importance to cross the country will appear in the Far West about Wednesday, cross the Middle West about Thursday or Friday and the Eastern States near the close of the week. It will be attended by local rains and be followed by cooler weather, which will overspread the Northwestern States Thursday or Friday."

NEW OPERATOR AT FAIRFIELD

Petition of Anna M. E. Biddle, of Gettysburg, for rule to show cause why certain change or incumbrance on a tract of land in Mt Pleasant township, containing 40 acres more or less, should not be discharged and satisfied of record. Petition granted.

Report of commission appointed in the case of Mary M. Eline made and decree made as requested.

Petition of J. W. Pettis for restoration to control of property. Court made suggestions and argument continued.

George F. Slagle, John Krug and Reuben B. Topper appointed appraisers in the assigned estate of Emma C. Johns, Imperial Cigar Company and S. L. Johns.

Henry Nace vs. S. L. Johns, argued. Charles M. Fische vs. James E. Kissinger argued.

STOCKING STREAMS

Distribution of trout for stocking streams has begun by the state department of fisheries and it is expected to keep up the shipments at a lively rate for the next three weeks. No estimates of the number to be put out can be made, but it is calculated to take care of localities where assurance has been given to the commissioner of fisheries that the fish will be cared for.

The shipment of young trout this year is later than usual because of the lateness of spring, many of the streams still being high and very cold. In some sections the trout will not be received for a fortnight. Only what are known as breeding fish, stock fish and fingerlings will be put out this year. Most of the young trout will be put out by the Pleasant Mount, Bellefonte and Corry hatcheries.

MOUNTAIN LINE COMING THIS WAY

Extension of Trolley from Highfield to Blue Ridge Summit Another Step Towards Gettysburg. Working this Week.

At the meeting of the stockholders of the Chambersburg, Greencastle and Waynesboro Street Railway Company, it was decided to begin work at once on the new extension of the trolley line from Highfield to Blue Ridge Summit.

John W. Warehime, one of the directors of the company, having been appointed to secure the rights of way several weeks ago, submitted his report, stating that he had succeeded in securing permission to extend the line through the lands of property owners from Highfield to a point along the turnpike at A. L. and J. Happel's store, between Blue Ridge Summit and Monterey.

Mr. Warehime was instructed to secure a civil engineer and begin making surveys of the proposed road and that work will begin this week.

A large force of men will be employed in order that work may be pushed to an early completion. It is predicted by Mr. Warehime that the road will be completed and ready for business by the opening of Pen Mar park, June 22.

Many persons have already made application for work on the new road. Work on the extension will go along much faster than on the line built from Pen Mar to Highfield as the territory to be traversed is almost level, with the exception of a few low lands which are in a miry condition and will have to be filled in with stone.

The new line will run about parallel with that of the harrisburg and Gettysburg division of the Western Maryland railroad and pass near the water tank of the railroad company and end at the turnpike at Happel Brothers' store.

LOCAL HUNTERS INTERESTED

Gettysburg and Adams County sportsmen are keenly interested in the drafting of the resident hunter's license bill, which will be introduced in the next legislature. The bill will be submitted to legislature candidates in the various assembly and senatorial districts before the coming primaries and the candidates asked to pledge their support for the measure, if elected as senators or legislators. Salient points of the act are:

The charge for the license to hunt is to be $1 per year.

The farmer, his children and his tenants are not required to take out licenses to hunt on the property they own or rent.

Any resident of the state, who is a citizen of the United States, shall be eligible to secure a license.

Licenses shall be issued by the prothonotary of each county at $1, or can be issued by justices of the peace at an additional cost of 25 cents.

The penalty is $20 fine for each day of hunting without a license.

Hunters must show licenses to any peace officer, game warden, owner of lands they are traversing, or agents of the owner, on demand, and refusal to so show licenses shall be punishable by a fine of $20 for each offense.

Magistrates, aldermen and justices of the peace shall have power of summary conviction for violations of the act, subject to the usual right of appeal to the courts.

All license fees collected to go to the state treasurer, and "to be used solely for the protection of wild bird and game protection, and for the purchase and propagation of game, and the payment of bounties."

The legislature shall, by separate enactment, appropriate the money so derived of the purposes above specified.

At least 50 per cent of the total revenue, or so much of this percentage as necessary, shall be used to pay bounties.

BULLET NOT REMOVED

Mrs. Ida Anthony, of Berwick township, who attempted suicide by shooting herself with a revolver on March 20, is getting along nicely. The bullet passed through her left lung, lodged under the skin of her back, and has not been removed.

Chicago, April 8.—The first "health marriage" under Dean Walter T. Sumner's requirement of medical certification will be performed in the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul April 19, when Miss Ruth Palmer will become the wife of A. W. Bode, a telephone operator in the Chicago police department.

Both were required to bring certificates from reputable physicians that they were neither physically nor mentally deficient and that they had neither incurable nor contagious disease.

ROAD DISPUTE HURTS DELAWARE

Georgetown's Hope For Prosperity Vanishes.

Georgetown, Del., April 8. — This place is panic-stricken as a result of the stoppage of work on the Dupont road. Business is practically at a standstill, and all hopes of the coming summer being a season of full and plenty are blasted.

The last of the teams have been taken away. The sixty engineers employed on the work have left the headquarters at Georgetown. The 500 men working on the road are idle, and 500 more men who had anticipated going to work on the road are disappointed. Steam rollers, concrete mixing machines and other accessories to the plant are standing idle and one by one are being moved away.

When the forty-five mules and the wagons and carts fled through the town of Georgetown on Saturday on the way to "The Moors," the summer residence of General T. Coleman Dupont, women shed tears and the men viewed the passing procession as if it were a funeral cortege. The people of Georgetown have no hopes that the busy scenes of a week ago will be reenacted.

All of Sussex county looks upon the stoppage of work on the road as a calamity. The announcement came as a bolt from a clear sky. Within a few weeks, if all had gone well, 3000 men would have been at work on the boulevard. These men, mostly laborers, were being paid $1.50 and $2 a day. No less than 200 teams were to work on the grading and hauling of material. These were earning $3 a day.

Killed by Wind-Wrecked Building.
Passaic, N. J., April 8.—During the terrific wind and rainstorm that swept over this section the two-story frame building at Ackerman and Parker avenues collapsed under the onslaught of the gale, killing one man, seriously injuring another and cutting and bruising others.

Year's First Heat Victim.
New York, April 8.—Richard McCordle, eighty-nine years of age, was overcome by the heat, according to Dr. Andrews, of Flower hospital, at the corner of Eighth avenue and Forty-seventh street Saturday. It is the first heat prostration of the season.

LEEVE BREAKS, HUNDREDS FLEE

Many Victims of Mississippi Flood in Danger.

MAROONED ON ROOFS AND TREES

Three Striking Pictures of the Stricken District in Tennessee and Arkansas.

Memphis, Tenn., April 8.—A telephone message from Helena, Ark., reports the collapse of the Mississippi river levee at Modoc, thirty miles south of Helena, in Phillips county.

The levee at Modoc has been regarded as one of the weakest points along the river, and large forces of men have worked continuously for a week in an endeavor to bolster up the embankment. The break probably will cause the overflow of the southern half of Phillips county and a portion of Monroe and Desha counties. Modoc is a small village, and there are no towns of importance in the immediate vicinity.

Suffering among hundreds of flood refugees in the last eighteen hours was common, though reports of loss of life had not been verified.

In the wide stretches of the Mississippi flooded areas there are three striking pictures. The northernmost is in the 500 square miles of the Reelfoot lake country, of Tennessee, where 2000 or more persons have been driven from their homes by the smashing of a Mississippi levee in southwestern Kentucky. In this district thousands of acres of fertile fields are under water. Scores of persons who have refused to desert their homes are now imprisoned in upper floors and on roofs of flood-menaced houses.

A few miles south, in Arkansas, three counties are under water. From this rich "bottom" country hundreds of farmers and villagers have been driven. Flood waters swept over the fertile fields and thriving villages with the breaking of the levee on the Arkansas side of the river north of Memphis.

Great numbers of persons marooned on roofs of houses and in trees have been taken out of the flooded district in boats. Probably many more water prisoners are in imminent peril, as there are not boats enough to perform the rescue work required. Three counties—Crittenden, Poinsett and Cross—are flooded.

The scene south of these points impresses one with the might of a giant stream on a rampage. Homes that once marked the center of rich "bottom" farms now float in a torrent that cannot be stayed. Bits of wreckage carried along in the tawny tide reflect the extent of the damage in the valley above.

From the standpoint of the northern dweller a picture of a Mississippi valley flood is best expressed in figures of possible life loss and statistics telling of the number of square miles inundated. To the valley planter owner a different picture presents itself. With him inundation of his farm by a torrent from the river's overflow means erosion of his acres, setback of his crops and loss of labor.

To the small farmer and "settler" the coming of the flood means flight. Hundreds of such persons have refused, however, to leave their homes and in many instances such cases have been dealt with through force. Those marooned in house-tops are compelled to take to barges and are sent to places of safety. There have been reports of fatalities among the "poor whites" and colored persons who had risked their own lives to save their mules.

Grocers, butchers and other small merchants, as well as saloonkeepers, are doing business in northern Memphis with from two to four feet of water in their stores. When the water tops the counters they give up and leave. Several blocks in the poor section of North Memphis have been thus affected by the water.

Granted Divorce, Hangs Herself.
Pittsboro, Ind., April 8.—Upon being notified that the county court had granted her a divorce from her third husband, Mrs. Mary Ann Hedges went to her room, locked the door and hanged herself with a rope tied to a bedpost. Her daughter, thinking she wished to be alone for awhile, forced the door after an hour and found her dead. She was seventy-two years old.

Jeweler Fails to Save Wife.
Washington, April 8. — Mrs. Ruth Owens Peck, wife of Paul Peck, the aviator, who has been flying with the army aviators in the south this winter, died here after a transfusion of blood from her husband in an attempt to save her life.

Choked to Death by Blubber.
Troy, N. Y., April 8.—While blowing a blubber with a group of little playmates here, Jessie Koska drew the blubber into her throat, and though she made frantic efforts to remove the obstacle she choked to death.

Fire in Laurel, Md.
Laurel, Md., April 8.—The prompt arrival and good work of the three fire companies of Laurel prevented the flames destroying a number of residences and other buildings when fire destroyed the lumber yard of George Waters, located beside the Baltimore and Ohio railroad tracks. Fire had gained considerable headway before discovered in the stable, where three horses were burned, and they had to be shot.

ROBBED BY SHAM GAS MAN

Woman Bound and Shorn of Her Tresses to Mar Her Beauty.

New York, April 8.—Bound and gagged, and with masses of long black hair, which had been cut from off her head, lying near her, Mrs. Sarah Gettelle, a brunette of striking appearance, was found in her apartment in Brooklyn by neighbors.

She declared that a sham gas inspector had gained admission to the house, robbed her of $18, tied her hands and feet, shorn her of her tresses, and then fled. She was treated by a hospital surgeon for hysteria and shock.

Mrs. Gettelle was so prostrated by her experiences that she was unable to give a good description of her assailant. The police don't believe that robbery was the prime motive of the attack, and are working on the theory that it was either that of a fanatic or prompted by the jealousy of some one who desired to mar the victim's beauty.

MISSING WOMAN IS DEAD

Body of Farmer's Wife, Who Disappeared March 14, Found on Mountain.

Allentown, Pa., April 8.—The body of Mrs. Julius Fossler, the Salisbury farmer's wife, who disappeared March 14, was found by William Frey, a neighboring farmer's son, who was hunting arbutus.

The husband had abandoned all his work to locate the missing woman and had appealed to every police department in the country. The coroner decided that she died of exposure after leaving home.

EXPLOSIONS CAUSE GREAT ALARM

Foreigners Were Celebrating Advent of Easter.

Shamokin, Pa., April 8.—A series of dynamite explosions on the mountains surrounding this place Sunday awoke people and threw them into a state of excitement and fear, many believing more homes and collieries were being blown up by dynamiters on account of the coal suspension.

Investigations made by the police revealed that foreigners were celebrating the advent of Easter by discharging explosives.

Reading railroad detectives continue their search for the gang of dynamiters who blew up Engineer Williams' home at Trevorton and portions of the Reading railroad last Thursday and expect to soon make arrests.

United Mine Workers' locals held meetings and speakers told audiences that the meeting with the operators at Philadelphia on Wednesday would likely result in something for them, and that meanwhile they should remain law abiding.

Owing to the high water in all the streams, as the result of the spring thaw, it is thought that, notwithstanding the result of the Philadelphia conference, the union will not order the pumpmen and firemen to desert their posts and put the collieries in danger of being flooded.

CALF VENISON AND VEAL

Freak of Nature Observed in a McVeytown Butcher's Purchase.

Lewistown, Pa., April 8. — Wilson White, a McVeytown butcher, purchased a freak calf from Joseph Harshberger, of Bratton township.

The calf, which is eight weeks old, seems to be veal and venison in equal proportions. The markings of the deer are a round nose, long, slender legs; carries its head high; has pointed ears sticking straight from the head and moves about in leaps and bounds instead of the even strides of the domesticated animal.

The animal's mother, a young heifer, was in pasture with deer in the Licking Creek Valley, in the heart of the Blue Ridge mountains, the past summer and fall.

Liver-Patch Brings Sanity.
Leipsic, Germany, April 8.—A remarkable operation has been performed on an imbecile child by Professor Erwin Payr, director of the surgical clinic attached to the Leipsic university, with great success. The professor planted a piece of thyroid gland taken from a healthy child born of a healthy mother into the liver of an imbecile child, who immediately afterward began to improve in intelligence, which steadily increased until a complete cure was effected.

The Captain's Daughter

Disgusted is no word in which to describe Miss Betts' condition of mind the other day when she found she was to share her stateroom on a south-bound steamer with Miss Phillis Brown. She clenched her elderly fists and grit her elderly teeth and betook herself to the purser's office.

"There's a woman in my stateroom," she announced acridly, "an' you can jest put her somewheres else. I don't want to have a stranger in the room with me."

"I'm sorry, madam, but it can't be helped. The boat is so crowded," said the purser.

"I wouldn't of come at all if I had a-know'n I'd have some other horrid passenger in the room with me," sulked the wizened little woman.

"Oh, she isn't a horrid passenger," soothed the purser good naturedly. "You'll like her when you know her."

"Think so?" sniffed Miss Betts, sarcastically. "You don't know me."

"Perhaps not," responded the purser, who knew Miss Brown's father. "But there are few ladies who could help liking the captain's daughter."

"The captain's daughter?" exclaimed Miss Betts, somewhat mollified. "It might be an advantage to know the captain's daughter."

"It will be a great advantage," said the purser confidently.

"She'll sit at the captain's table, of course, an' she'll know all the ship's officers, I s'pose. An' maybe she'll take me round an' show me the whole ship an' I never was through a ship in my life," remarked Miss Betts, musingly. "Oh, well, I guess she can stay," concluded the little woman, now completely restored to good humor.

Then she bobbed away with her little mincing steps and returning to her stateroom made herself pleasant in her own peculiar way to Miss Phillis Brown, whom she found sitting on the edge of the lower berth, gazing in her handbag for a box of candy. "It'll be real nice to have company," remarked Miss Betts ingratiatingly. "I s'pose you won't mind taking the upper berth. I ain't so spry as I was."

"I won't mind at all," assented Miss Brown.

"Do you think your father'd approve of your eatin' that candy just before puttin' out to sea?"

"I don't think he'd mind," replied Miss Brown. "Won't you have some?"

"Oh, Lor', no! I'd be sick as two cats if I was to eat it. Does your father ever get seasick?"

"I believe he does sometimes," responded the young lady, looking curiously at Miss Betts. "Why do you ask?"

"Oh, nothin'. I just wanted to know," said Miss Betts. "I s'pose you have the run of the whole ship," she continued.

"No more than any one else," repudiated Miss Brown, again looking curiously at her new acquaintance.

Miss Betts raised her already highly arched eyebrows, till they were almost lost among the roots of her sparse hair, but she merely said: "Well, any way, maybe you'll be able to take me round and show me the interestin' parts of the ship. The galleys an' the bridge an' the engine room," she concluded vaguely.

"Yes, indeed?" responded Miss Brown. "I'll show you all I can." Later on she kept her word nobly and patiently walked the little old woman about the ship, telling her all she knew of ships in general and of this ship in particular.

But her explanations did not apparently satisfy Miss Betts, for that night, as they were retiring, she remarked, "I should a-thought your pa would a-taught you all there was to know about ships."

"He has told me a lot about them," replied Miss Brown.

"Well, there was lots of things you couldn't tell me about this one an' seems to me you might of. An' down to the saloon, when we was at dinner, we didn't sit at the captain's table at all."

"Were you going to?" asked Miss Brown.

"Was I goin' to? Of course I was goin' to. I thought that was one of the privileges of roomin' with the captain's daughter. That's what I understood. I should think your father would want to have you sit with him at table an' I should think he'd introduce you to all the ship's officers."

"I'm sure I don't know what you're talkin' about," returned Miss Brown, with a bewildered look. "My father doesn't know any of the officers."

"Well, he's a funny captain, then, not to know the officers of his own ship!"

"I think you must be dreamin', Miss Betts!" exclaimed the girl. "My father has nothing to do with this ship nor its officers nor with seating the passengers at table. My father happens to have served in the Spanish war and held the rank of captain. He never set foot on this ship that I know of."

"Then the purser lied!" snapped Miss Betts indignantly.

Yet the purser had not lied.

Interest in Fossil Beds.
The fossil beds of the west that have furnished such wonderful specimens of gigantic animals of former ages, such as, for instance, the dipodocus, replicas of which have recently been placed on exhibition in several of the great European museums, sometimes yield fossils, which, if not so large as the great saurian mentioned above, are nevertheless of paramount interest to men of science. During the summer of 1909, the remains of several fossil turtles were collected by members of the United States geological survey, and from a study of these Prof. O. P. Hay has been able to describe eight new species of fossil turtles from west of the one hundredth meridian.

What to have for dessert is the daily question asked by thousands of housewives all over the land. Here is one to try:
Orange Tartlets.—Take two table-spoonsful of sponge cake crumbs, two table-spoonsful of cream, a teaspoonful of vanilla, two table-spoonsful of butter, one egg, the grated rind and juice of an orange and four table-spoonsful of sugar. Roll out some pastry, cut in rounds and line gem pans with it. Beat the butter to a cream, add the egg, well beaten, then the crumbs and flavoring and juice of the orange. Mix well together and put a teaspoonful in the lined gem pans. Bake fifteen minutes in a hot oven.
Ice cream with a hot pudding sauce of maple sirup or chocolate makes a delicious dessert.
Caramel Rice Pudding.—Cook a cup of rice in six cups of milk in a double boiler two hours, then add a teaspoonful of salt, two eggs slightly beaten and the rind of half an orange. Caramelize a cup of sugar in a saucepan and when a golden brown pour it into the mold, coating the sides on the inner surface. Add the rice mixture, cover and cook in the oven; let stand twenty minutes in the pan of hot water. Remove from the oven and serve with a soft custard.
Steamed Date Pudding.—Cover two and a fourth cups of soft bread crumbs with a third of a cup of milk. Chop a cup of figs and a half cup of suet together; add three beaten eggs, a cup of brown sugar and a teaspoonful of salt. Pour into a melon mold and steam for three hours and a half. Serve with an egg sauce. Beat three eggs until foamy, add half a cup of sugar and a half cup of hot milk with a teaspoonful of flavoring.
Cocoa Fruit Pudding.—Chop two-thirds of a cup of suet and a cup of figs, two and a fourth cups of bread-crumbs in a meat chopper; add a half cup of cocoa, a cup of brown sugar, two eggs, a half cup of milk and a half teaspoonful of salt. Steam three hours and serve with chocolate sauce or sweetened cream whipped.

Peter R. Taft Gained Wide Prominence in His County by His Discharge of Duties of Surveyor.
Among the early settlers of Townshend, Vermont, was a family by the name of Taft. They came from Uxbridge, Mass., in the winter of 1795. Their household goods, writes Hamilton Child in the "History of Windham County, Vermont," were loaded upon a sled drawn by oxen.
Peter R. Taft, fourteen years of age, accompanied the family. He came all the way on foot, and drove the cow. In the winter, like other farmers' boys, he did chores, helped prepare wood for the fire at home, and went to the district school. During the other months he helped his father on the farm. His education, however, was under the oversight of his father, who was a college graduate.
Fondness for mathematics resulted in his becoming a land surveyor, and in a few years he received the appointment of county surveyor. The accuracy of his work in establishing disputed lines brought him into public notice, and by the time he was of age he was well known in every part of the county.
The duties of his office made necessary a long attendance on his part at the terms of the county court. On such occasions he was a willing as well as an attentive listener, and so gained a knowledge of many legal principles, which led to his receiving the appointment of trial justice.
From his first experience the public had great confidence in his fairness; and in his capacity as a magistrate, his decisions were received with approval. He devoted his spare moments to reading, and became a man of wide knowledge, whose foresight and executive talents were appreciated by those who came in contact with him. His grandson now lives in Washington.—Youth's Companion.

H. N. GITT

To the Democratic Voters of the Twentieth Congressional District.

Mr. Gitt, who is not an active candidate, has consented to accept the Democratic nomination for congress, if the voters of this district consider him the most logical candidate, and if nominated, will make an aggressive campaign to win.

Mr. Gitt is not only popular in his home town, Hanover, but in what is known as the Democratic belt as well and is unquestionably the strongest nominee who can be placed on the Democratic ticket, for the further reason that he is also well known throughout the whole of York and Adams counties.

He has always been an active and earnest worker in the interests of Democracy and always anxious to bring about harmony in the party. If there be any Democrat of whom there ought to be many who can redeem this district, there can be no doubt that he is one of them. He is a man of affairs, with more general personal knowledge and experience of the agricultural, industrial and commercial interests of this district than any other one man and is undoubtedly well qualified to represent this important congressional district in the House of Congress.

In view of his exceptionally broad and abundant experience on all matters pertaining to the vital issues of the day, he is peculiarly fitted to represent the people of this district, especially the farmer, the mechanic, the working man and the merchant, in congress.

This congressional district for a number of years has been misrepresented in Congress by our present representative, a member of the party in the minority in the district. It is high time that this condition be changed and we believe that Mr. Gitt is the man who, if nominated can and will bring victory to his party.

We, therefore, appeal to the Democratic voters of this, the 20th congressional district, to vote for Mr. Gitt, on April 13th, for we earnestly believe that his nomination will insure the success of our party at the polls in November.

Yours very truly,
Committee of Democrats interested in the success of the Party

CLIMAX REACHED IN PARTY FIGHTS

Primary Battles This Week in Several States.

TURNING POINT AT LAST

Pennsylvania and Illinois May Make or Break the Four Big Candidates For the Presidency.

Washington, April 8.—Things political will move with a rush the coming week, a lot of history will be made and the fate of some presidential candidates will be settled.

Republican state conventions will be held in Iowa, New York, Maine, Vermont, Michigan and Kentucky. Two great states, Pennsylvania and Illinois, will hold state-wide presidential primaries, and district conventions will be held in many districts north and south.

In all, 160 delegates to the Chicago convention will be chosen, 64 of these coming from Pennsylvania and 50 from Illinois. In the fight in the latter state most interest centers for both Republicans and Democrats. Roosevelt is supposed to be strong in Illinois, as his friends who have been working there like beavers for weeks are well organized and generously supplied with the sinews of war, according to all reports reaching Washington.

The colonel himself has pervaded the state much of late, and it is therefore expected that he will get the lion's share of the delegates to the Chicago convention to be chosen at tomorrow's primaries. The Taft people are disposed to concede this, but they do it in a way that indicates they have something up their sleeves and are secretly hopeful they will be able to give the colonel another jolt that may prove decisive.

Director William McKinley, manager of the Taft campaign, is from Illinois and is extensively interested in big interurban trolley lines that form a network of trackage over a large area of the commonwealth. He has at his command a small army of federal officeholders that has been quietly but none the less effectively spreading the Taft tidings in every hamlet these many weeks. Then the Lorimer machine, whose influence is not confined to Chicago by any means, is busy in the president's behalf. Thus the Taft cause is not at all a forlorn hope in Illinois, and it may be that Roosevelt will get out of the state far less than the Taft people now say they think he ought to get.

Taft will get fully sixty of the delegates to be chosen at the Pennsylvania primaries on Saturday next, according to the calculations of Director McKinley and Senator Penrose, and he will pick up many additional in various states during the week.

To Democrats the Illinois primaries tomorrow will be almost as interesting as to the Republicans. The contest in the state between the backers of Speaker Champ Clark and Governor Woodrow Wilson is keen, and both camps are very hopeful of a decisive victory.

Governor Wilson's manager claims that he has no organization in the state and has had no money to form even the nucleus of one, while it is asserted that the speaker's backers are well organized and active in almost every county.

If Governor Wilson can split even with Clark in the contest for Illinois delegates it will give the New Jersey candidate another boost as big as that given him by his victory in Wisconsin, in the judgment of his supporters. They next Saturday expect a still more decisive boost for Wilson when Pennsylvania Democrats select their 64 district delegates to the Baltimore convention, practically all of which are expected to be for the New Jersey governor. If the expectations of the Wilson men are realized in Illinois and Pennsylvania their candidate will wind up the week with a comfortable lead over the speaker. He now has only 42 delegates to his credit, 19 from Oklahoma, 24 from Wisconsin and 8 from Maine. Speaker Clark has 84 on his string.

They next Saturday expect a still more decisive boost for Wilson when Pennsylvania Democrats select their 64 district delegates to the Baltimore convention, practically all of which are expected to be for the New Jersey governor. If the expectations of the Wilson men are realized in Illinois and Pennsylvania their candidate will wind up the week with a comfortable lead over the speaker. He now has only 42 delegates to his credit, 19 from Oklahoma, 24 from Wisconsin and 8 from Maine. Speaker Clark has 84 on his string.

Governor Wilson's manager claims that he has no organization in the state and has had no money to form even the nucleus of one, while it is asserted that the speaker's backers are well organized and active in almost every county.

MRS. LOUISE VERMILYA.

Jury Fails to Convict Alleged

Poisoner in Chicago.

VERMILYA JURY DISAGREES

Judge Discharges Men Who Stood Nine to Three For Conviction.

Chicago, April 8.—The jury in the case of Mrs. Louise Vermilya, charged with murdering Richard T. Smith, a railroad man, was discharged by Judge Sullivan, after members of the jury informed the court that they could not agree upon a verdict.

The jury had been out eight hours. Members of the jury from the time the first ballot was taken stood 9 to 3 for conviction. It was said. Not a man wavered in his opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the woman, who was accused of having poisoned Smith with arsenic.

BEEF ADVANCES 8 CENTS A POUND

Enormous Increases in New York Market.

New York, April 8.—Prices of beef, pork and mutton have jumped enormously in the last week.

According to the proprietor of a chain of butcher shops, there has been a tremendous advance in the wholesale and retail cost of meats in the last week.

Experts in the business announce that the meat packers have advanced the prices of hinds and ribs of beef by 4 cents a pound wholesale. They say this means an advance of the retail price amounting to 8 cents a pound. The wholesale price aggregates 14½ cents a pound for one-half of the meat, while they have to dispose of the rest at the rate of from 4 to 6 cents a pound.

In pork loins the same proportionate advance has been registered. The packers have advanced the price to the dealers to 15 cents a pound, which is an advance of 5 cents per pound. The product is now being retailed to the consumer at the rate of 16 cents a pound.

Retail dealers admitted that the cost of cattle, calves, sheep and lambs had legitimately advanced in price recently, but not so much as to warrant the great increase demanded by the packers.

Floods in the Ohio and Mississippi river districts were blamed for much of the increase in the cost of meat, since such disturbances had been a reason for the higher cost of the transportation in the case of live stock.

Los Angeles Girl Swears to Registry Questions as Camera Snaps Her.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 8.—Miss Myra Lee, daughter of a well to do Chinese merchant here, is the first Chinese woman to register as a voter under the franchise granted to the women.

She is twenty-two years old and a graduate of the high school. She is a suffragette and believes the women of China and Japan will get the ballot.

Posed as a Federal Officer.

Seattle, Wash., April 8.—Lloyd H. D. Kingsbury, alias Spencer, left on arrest for Pittsburgh, Pa., where he is wanted on a charge of impersonating an officer of the United States department of agriculture. Kingsbury is alleged to have cashed worth less checks on the representation that he was a federal agent, is said to have operated in nearly every large city in the country.

Drowned in Canoe Upset.

Lafayette, Ind., April 8.—Christopher Gates, Jr., a Purdue university student, was drowned when he and Max well Johnson tried to ride the turbulent Wabash river in a canoe. The canoe turned over, and Johnson, an expert swimmer, reached shore. Gates clung to the boat, but sank before assistance could be given.

BIG EASTER CROWD AT ATLANTIC CITY

The Boardwalk Pageant a Riot of Colors.

100,000 VISITORS THERE

Roller Chair Trust Doubles Prices and Hotels and Restaurants Do Big Business.

Atlantic City, N. J., April 8.—Dame Fashion had her innings on the boardwalk yesterday before the rain put an end to the display of spring finery.

The latest thing in hats, suits and shoes and stockings were on exhibition and were examined with interest until the rain sent to the crowd of fully 100,000 scurrying for shelter.

"Booze" was procurable at nearly every cafe in town, both after mid night and again on Sunday.

Heavy showers interrupted the afternoon parade and in the evening a steady rain set in.

There was no set style in either costumes or chapeau. Dame Fashion seemed to have secured "inside information" on the weather. She decreed comparatively small bonnets, fitting closely to the head, as the mode for the boardwalk, saving the fair ones from windmill tactics to control their headgear in the wind. Trimming was rather sparse, but the entire length of the boardwalk was redolent with the perfume of spring flowers, which decorated the corsage of three out of every four fair paraders, in big clusters.

The tam-o-shanter hat, with nifty variations, was the most worn. The hit of the day was a big red creation with a saucy tilt, worn by a lowly brunette, whose gown was of the new panier cut, built of richly shaded red and yellow.

Low shoes for men and women captured popular favor.

The roller chair trust doubled its prices, getting a dollar an hour for the wicker conveyances. There was a waiting list at the dining rooms of every hotel and restaurant in the resort. The same was true in cafedom in the evening.

The railroads abandoned regular schedules to transport the tired paraders back to their home cities. When the rain started down in earnest the throngs started to leave. Long trains followed by sections and specials, steamed out with a regularity that dropped the crowd figures by the thousand.

Although a score or more of bathers dared pneumonia in the breakers during the summery weather of Saturday, the number dwindled yesterday to a half dozen intrepid men who took short dips in the breakers, and then ran shivering to the bath houses.

The boardwalk crowd overflowed onto the beach by thousands while the resting places in the pavilions were packed with footsore strollers who started on their promenades too early for real comfort.

Harsh language toward children, constant chiding and scolding, blows and taunting words do not presage a life of refinement of thought and action for the children so brought up. Constant nagging and reprimanding do not improve the tempers of the little folk nor do they make them more considerate or faithful to their duties.

On the contrary just this course raises all that is unlovely and unlovable in the child and gives its character a trend that places it in a false position throughout the after years.

There are people born with irritable dispositions and none of them are ever improved by being kept in constant turmoil or by being allowed to have free reign in displaying them. Most children are amenable to persuasion and wonderfully responsive to kindness. Therefore, childhood should be the time for training the child to put forth the best that is in it and to repress its bad points until they are choked out, says an exchange. But no child can be improved under a regime of scolding, blows and rancorous bickering on the part of its elders, or the constant repetition of an attitude of hostility between those same elders.

The children of the home have sooner or later to take their places in the world and the character of those places is determined by the training given them through their earliest years. If love and sweetness of disposition are generated in their nature; if a fine sense of justice and a realization of the rights of others are given them as the underlying principles of life, they will reflect just these when they go out into the world and typify to that world exactly the type of home in which they grow up.

CHAPTER I.

The Boy at the Barony.

The Quintards had not prospered on the barren lands of the pine woods whither they had emigrated to escape the malaria of the low coast, but this no longer mattered, for the last of his name and race, old General Quintard, was dead in the great house his father had built almost a century before and the thin acres of the Barony, where he had made his last stand against age and poverty, were to claim him, now that he had given up the struggle in their midst.

Though he had lived continuously at the Barony for almost a quarter of a century, there was none among his neighbors who could say he had looked on that thin, aquiline face in all that time. Yet they had known much of him, for the gossip of the slaves, who had been his only friends in those years he had chosen to deny himself to other friends, had gone far and wide over the country.

That notable man of business, Jonathan Crenshaw, was closeted in the library with a stranger to whom rumor fixed the name of Bladen, supposing him to be the legal representative of certain remote connections of the old general's.

Crenshaw sat before the flat-topped mahogany desk with several account-books before him. Bladen stood by the window.

"I suppose you will buy in the property when it comes up for sale," the latter was saying.

Crenshaw nodded. "He lived entirely alone, saw no one, I understand," said Bladen.

"Alone with his two or three old slaves—yes, sir. He wouldn't even see me."

There was a brief pause, then Crenshaw spoke again. "I reckon, sir, if you know anything about the old gentleman's private affairs you don't feel no call to speak on that point?" he observed.

"All I know is this: General Quintard was a conspicuous man in these parts fifty years ago; he married a Beaufort."

"So he did," said Crenshaw, "and there was one child, a daughter; she married a South Carolinian by the name of Turberville. Great folks, those Turbervilles, rolling rich."

"And what became of the daughter who married Turberville?"

"Died years ago," said Crenshaw. They were interrupted by a knock at the door.

"Come in," said Crenshaw. The door opened and a small boy entered the room dragging after him a long rifle. Suddenly overcome by a shyness, he paused on the threshold to stare with round, wondering eyes at the two men. "Well, sonny, what do you want?" asked Mr. Crenshaw indignantly.

"Please, sir, I want this here old spo'tin' rifle," said the child.

"I reckon you may keep it—at least I've no objection," Crenshaw glanced at Bladen.

"Oh, by all means," said the latter. Spasms of delight shook the small figure. With a murmur that was meant for thanks he backed from the room, closing the door. Bladen glanced inquiringly at Crenshaw.

"You want to know about him, sir? Well, that's Hannibal Wayne Hazard. But who Hannibal Wayne Hazard is—just wait a minute, sir—and quitting his chair Mr. Crenshaw hurried from the room to return almost immediately with a tall countryman. "Mr. Bladen, this is Bob Yancy. Bob, the gentleman wants to hear about the woman and the child; that's your story."

"Howdy, sir," said Mr. Yancy. He appeared to meditate on the mental effort that was required of him.

"It was four years ago come next Christmas," said Crenshaw.

"Old Christmas," corrected Mr. Yancy. "The evening befo', it was, and I'd gone to Fayetteville to get my Christmas fixin's. Just at sundown I hooked up that blind mule of mine to the cart and started for home. A mile out of town I heard some one sloshing through the rain after me. I pulled up and waited, and then I made out it was a woman. She spoke when she was alongside the cart and says, 'Can you drive me on to the Barony?' When I got down to help her into the cart I saw she was totting a child in her arms. Well, sir, she hardly spoke until we came to the red gate, when she says, 'Stop, if you please; I'll walk the rest of the way.' The last I seen of her she was hurrying through the rain totting the child in her arms."

Mr. Crenshaw took up the narrative. "When morning come she was gone, but the child done stayed behind. I've heard Aunt Alsidia tell as how the old general said that morning, pale and shaking like, 'You'll find a boy asleep in the red room; he's to be fed and—' but I never seen him out of my sight. His name is Hannibal Wayne Hazard. That is all the general ever said on the matter."

The old general was borne across what had once been the west lawn to his resting-place in the neglected acre where the dead and gone of his race lay, and the record of the family was complete, as far as any man knew. Then Crenshaw, assisted by Bob Yancy, proceeded to secure the great house against intrusion.

They passed from room to room securing doors and windows, and at last stepped out upon the back porch.

"Hullo!" said Yancy, pointing. There on a bench by the kitchen door was Hannibal Wayne Hazard asleep, with his old spo'tin' rifle across his knees.

"Well, I declare to goodness!" said Crenshaw.

"I reckon you'd rather drop a word with yo' missus before you toted him home?" suggested Yancy, who knew something of the nature of his friend's domestic thralldom.

"A woman ought to be boss in her own house," said Crenshaw.

"Feelin' the truth of that, I've never married, Mr. John. But I was going to say, what's to hinder me from totting that boy to my home?"

"If you'll take the boy, Bob, you shan't lose by it."

Yancy rested a big knotted hand on the boy's shoulder.

"Come, wake up, sonny!" The child roused with a start and stared into the strange bearded face that was bent toward him. "It's yo' Uncle Bob," continued Yancy in a wheedling tone. "Here, give us the spo'tin' rifle to tote!"

Yancy balanced the rifle on his great palm and his eyes assumed a speculative cast.

"I wonder what's to hinder us from loading this old gun, and firing this old gun go—bang! Eh?"

The child's blue eyes grew wide.

"Please, Uncle Bob, make it go bang!"

"You come along, then," and Mr. Yancy moved off in the direction of his mule, the child following.

Thereafter beguiling speech flowed steadily from Mr. Yancy's bearded lips, in the midst of which relations were established between the mule and cart, and the boy quitted the Barony for a new world.

"This," said Yancy, "Are Scratch Hill."

The afternoon sun waned as they went deeper and deeper into the pine woods, but at last they came to their journey's end, a widely scattered settlement on a hill above a branch.

"This," said Mr. Yancy, "are Scratch Hill, sonny. Why Scratch Hill? Some say it's the fleas; others agin hold it's the eternal bother of making a living here, but whether fleas or living you scratch for both."

CHAPTER II.

Captain Murrell Asks Questions.

In the deep peace that rested like a benediction on the pine-clad slopes of Scratch Hill the boy Hannibal followed at Yancy's heels as that gentleman pursued the not arduous rounds of temperate industry which made up his daily life, for if Yancy were not completely idle he was responsible for a counterfeit presentation of idleness having most of the merits of the real article.

The Barony had been offered for sale and bought in by Crenshaw for eleven thousand dollars, this being the amount of his claim. Some six months later he sold the plantation for fifteen thousand dollars to Nathaniel Ferris, of Currituck county.

"There's money in the old place, Bob, at that figure," Crenshaw told Yancy.

"Bladen's got an answer from them South Carolina Quintards, and they don't know nothing about the boy," added Crenshaw. "So you can rest easy, Bob; they ain't going to want him."

Well, sir, that surely is a passel of comfort to me. I find I got all the instincts of a father without having had none of the instincts of a husband."

A richer, deeper realization of his joy came to Yancy when he had turned his back on Balaam's Cross Roads and set out for home through the fragrant silence of the pine woods.

Just beyond the Barony, which was midway between Balaam's and the Hill, down the long stretch of sand-road he saw two mounted figures, then as they drew nearer he caught the flutter of skirts and recognized one of the horsewomen. It was Mrs. Ferris, wife of the Barony's new owner. She reined in her horse abreast of his cart.

"Aren't you Mr. Yancy?" she asked. "I am Mrs. Ferris, and I am very pleased to make your acquaintance."

"The same here," murmured Yancy with winning civility.

Mrs. Ferris's companion leaned forward, her face averted, and stroked her horse's neck with gloved hand.

"This is my friend, Miss Betty Malroy."

"Glad to know you, ma'am," said Yancy.

Miss Malroy faced him, smiling. She was quite radiant with youth and beauty.

"We are just returning from Scratch Hill," said Mrs. Ferris.

"And the dear little boy we met is your nephew, is he not, Mr. Yancy?" It was Betty Malroy who spoke.

"In a manner he is and in a manner he ain't," explained Yancy, somewhat enigmatically.

"Do you know the old deserted cabin by the big pine?—the Blount place?" asked Mrs. Ferris.

"Yes, ma'am, I know it."

"I am going to have Sunday school there for the children; they shan't be neglected any longer if I can help it. Now won't you let your little nephew come?"

"I reckon you-all can count on my nevy," Bob said.

Hannibal and Yancy were the first to arrive at the deserted cabin in the old field Sunday afternoon. Shy children from the pine woods, big brothers with little sisters and big sisters with little brothers, drifted out of the encircling forest.

Mrs. Ferris's missionary spirit manifested itself agreeably enough on the whole. She read certain chapters from the Bible, finishing with the story of David, a narrative that made a deep impression upon Yancy, comfortably seated in the doorway.

"You will all be here next Sunday, won't you?—and at the same hour?" she said, rising.

There was a sudden clatter of hoofs beyond the door. A man, well dressed and well mounted had ridden into the yard. As Mrs. Ferris came from the cabin he flung himself out of the saddle and, hat in hand, approached her.

"I am hunting a place called the Barony; can you tell me if I am on the right road?" he asked. He was a man in the early thirties, graceful and powerful of build, with a handsome face.

"It is my husband you wish to see? I am Mrs. Ferris."

"Then General Quintard is dead?" His tone was one of surprise.

"His death occurred over a year ago, and my husband now owns the Barony; were you a friend of the general's?"

"No, madam; he was my father's friend, but I had hoped to meet him." His manner was adroit and plausible.

"Will you ride on with us to the Barony and meet my husband, Mr. Yancy?"

"Murrell—Captain Murrell. Thank you; I should like to see the old place. I should highly value the privilege," then his eyes rested on Miss Malroy.

"Betty, let me present Captain Murrell."

The captain bowed, giving her a glance of bold admiration.

By this time the children had straggled off into the pine woods as silently as they had assembled; only Yancy and Hannibal remained. Mrs. Ferris turned to the former.

"If you will close the cabin door, Mr. Yancy, everything will be ready for next Sunday," she said, and moved toward the horses, followed by Murrell. Betty Malroy lingered for a moment at Hannibal's side.

"Good-by, little boy; you must ask your Uncle Bob to bring you up to the big house to see me," and stooping she kissed him. "Good-by, Mr. Yancy."

ter, for he himself had heard from Bladen that he had decided to assume the care of the boy.

"I reckon Bladen will have the law on his side, Bob!"

"The law be damned—I got what's fair on mine. I don't wish fo' better than that," exclaimed Yancy, over his shoulder. He strode from the store and started down the sandy road at a brisk run. Miserable forebodings of an impending tragedy leaped up within him, and the miles were many that lay between him and the Hill.

As he breasted the slope he came within sight of a little group in his own dooryard. Saving only Uncle Sammy Bellamy, the group resolved itself into the women and children of the Hill, but there was one small figure he missed. The patriarch hurried toward him, leaning on his cane.

"They've took your nevy, Bob!" he cried, in a high, thin voice.

"Who's took him?" asked Yancy hoarsely.

"Hit were Dave Blount. Get your gun, Bob, and go after him—kill the miserable sneaking cuss!" cried Uncle Sammy. "By the Fayetteville Road, Bob, not ten minutes ago—you can cut him off at Ox Road forks!"

Yancy breathed a sigh of relief. A rifle was placed in Yancy's hands.

"Thank you-all kindly," said Yancy, and turning away he struck off through the pine woods. A brisk walk of twenty minutes brought him to the Ox Road forks.

He had not long to wait, for presently the buggy hove in sight. As the buggy came nearer he recognized his ancient enemy in the person of the man who sat at Hannibal's side, and stepping into the road seized the horses by their bits. At sight of him Hannibal shrieked his name in delight.

"Uncle Bob—Uncle Bob—" he cried. "Yes, it's Uncle Bob. You can light down, Nevy."

"Leggo them horses!" said Mr. Blount.

"Light down, Nevy," said Yancy, still pleasantly.

Hannibal instantly availed himself of the invitation. At the same moment Blount struck at Yancy with his whip, and his horses reared wildly, thinking the blow meant for them. Seeing that the boy had reached the ground in safety, Yancy relaxed his hold on the team, which instantly plunged forward. Then as the buggy swept past him he made a grab at Blount and dragged him out over the wheels into the road, where he proceeded to fetch Mr. Blount a smack in the jaw. Then with a final spiteful kick he sent Mr. Blount sprawling. "Don't let me catch you around these diggings again, Dave Blount, or I swear to God I'll be the death of you!"

Hannibal rode home through the pine woods in triumph on his Uncle Bob's mighty shoulders.

Discrepancy somewhere.

Aviators are popularly supposed to be men of iron nerve and perfect physical condition. Yet the great Vedrines was rejected for military service on account of physical shortcomings and a special arrangement has had to be made by which his services as an aviator might be utilized during the French maneuvers.

"The marriage license clerks were literally swamped with applicants on Christmas Eve."

"Ah! I wonder if the Yule-tied will stay tied longer than the June-tied."

MEDICAL ADVERTISING

JERSEY MAN'S STORY

There is a rugged, robust New Jersey man, George W. Thompson, by name, living in Manasquan, who has an interesting life-story to relate.

"About two years ago, he said (in a recent letter) 'my health broke down and I felt fagged out all the time, having very little strength and being nervous with poor appetite.'

"I think Vinol is the best spring medicine on the market today, for since taking it I can say that I feel like a new man. I have regained my strength, eat well, sleep like a log."

Right now is the time for you, if you are weak and run down, can't eat or sleep, to take Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron remedy.

No matter whether you are a feeble old person or young and sickly, if you are not strong and vigorous as you ought to be, Vinol is for you and it will build you up. Take it on our guaranty of satisfaction and if it disappoints you we will give back your money. But if you need new strength begin taking Vinol now.

WHO SUFFERS FROM RHEUMATISM

Surely No Reader Of The Gettysburg Times When The People's Drug Store Sells RHEUMA For 50 Cents On Money-Back Plan.

If you suffer from torturing rheumatic pains, swollen twisted joints, and suffer intensely because your system is full of uric acid, that damnable poison that makes thousands helpless and kills thousands years before their time, then you need RHEUMA, and need it now.

Start taking it today; in 24 hours it will begin to act on kidneys, liver, stomach and blood, and you can sincerely exclaim: "Good riddance to bad rubbish!"

Many people, the most skeptical of skeptics right in this city and in the country hereabouts, bless the day when The People's Drug Store with characteristic enterprise offered RHEUMA to the afflicted at the low price of 50 cents a bottle. If you have rheumatism, get RHEUMA today.

Important Letter to All Who Suffer

"I suffered from indigestion for a long time. Last May I almost died. The doctor told me it was acute indigestion and I could not be cured. Since that time I have suffered very much, as some days everything I ate, even light food, as soft boiled eggs, would distress me. I lost fifteen pounds. Sometimes I felt that I could not live another day. A month ago I got a box of MI-ONA tablets. Before I had used them a week I was better. I have used 2 boxes and I feel as well as I ever did. Eunice A. Peters, Jackson, Ga.

Use MI-ONA stomach tablets for quick relief from sour stomach, heaviness, heartburn, belching of gas and distress after eating. They are guaranteed. Large box 50c. at The People's Drug Store and druggists everywhere.
